SURRENDER IS TO BE SIGNED ON AUGUST 31

Tokyo Radio Reports Allied Leader To Fly To Nip Capital City

MacArthur apparently will arrive in Japan only on that date the Japanese report of August 31 seemed more likely to be borne out by events.

The first occupation forces will be largely American, but also will include Australian and Philippines units. British and Soviet units probably will join them later.

Japs List Landings
Tokyo reported that American air-borne landings at Atsugi would be followed on Tuesday by the landing of additional troops from warships and transports at Yokosuka, naval base city at the southwest entrance to Tokyo bay.

The landings and occupation of the Tokyo area will be completed August 31, Tokyo said, and next day other forces will begin landing at Kanova airfield in Kago-shima prefecture at the southern tip of Kyushu, southernmost of the enemy home islands.

Japanese headquarters radioed MacArthur a request for permission to use unarmed planes flying red pennants for "various urgent liaison matters in connection with prosecution of surrender requirements."

MacArthur previously had banned all enemy plane flights over Japan.

A Japanese imperial headquarters announcement identified for the first time the three members of Emperor Hirohito's family who were dispatched to the southern regions, China and Manchuria to relay the imperial cease-fire order to Japanese troops.

Maj. Gen. Prince Haruhito Kanin was sent to the southern regions, Lt. Col. Prince Takehiko Asaka, to China, and Lt. Col. Prince Tsuneyoshi Takeda, to Manchuria, the announcement said. All three were described as "princes of blood."

His order followed attacks by Japanese planes on American reconnaissance aircraft over both Kyushu and the Tokyo area following Hirohito's cease-fire order to the imperial forces.

Tokyo newspapers, meantime, echoed the government's call to the people to remain calm and composed during the Allied occupation of their homeland.

Mainichi, Tokyo radio said, asserted that the United States, while showing no mercy in regard to the enforcement of the Potsdam terms, appears to be careful not to hurt the feelings of the Japanese people.

The newspaper admonished the nation against any rash action which it said would cause serious concern to Hirohito and further trouble for the entire Japanese people.

Asahi said the American attitude toward Japan's surrender emissaries indicated that the United States would treat the "Japanese nation with understanding."

Tokyo also said that civilian passenger travel would be restricted in the greater Tokyo area for the next four days to speed the evacuation of Japanese soldiers from areas to be occupied by Allied troops.

LITTLE CHANGE NOTED ON ALL PACIFIC FRONTS

The situation on Pacific fronts Wednesday:

Manila—Tokyo announced Gen. Douglas MacArthur would fly to Japanese capital Tuesday and three days later would dictate formal surrender aboard U. S. warship in Tokyo bay; Japan reported first occupation troop contingent would total 20,000 men.

Chungking—formal surrender of 1,090,000 Japanese troops in China appeared likely within 48 hours at Nanking; China served notice on Japan her troops would take over Formosa and northern half of Indo-China, Chinese troops reached gates of Nanchang, Kokong, and Swatow.

London—Japanese radio at Saigon was heard acknowledging receipt of Lord Mountbatten's third surrender message to Japanese southern army but it maintained that no orders had been received from Emperor Hirohito to cease fighting.

London—Moscow radio announced capture of Emperor Kang Teh, Japan's puppet ruler in Manchuria, and 52,000 more Japanese officers and men; entire fifth Kwangtung army surrendered.

Chungking—American parachute teams reported liberation of 1,700 Allied war prisoners and civilian internees in China and Manchuria; American bomber reported en route to bring out Lt. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright.

Borneo, Bougainville, New Guinea—Situation unchanged with isolated pockets of Japanese still showing sporadic resistance pending arrival of imperial emissaries or completion of formal surrender negotiations.

This development means that whatever military purchases are made will be entirely of the better grades of meat. Cheaper grades were suitable for canning. Choice steaks and roasts, however, will still be available for civilians in larger quantities, officials predicted.

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson said recently that civilians may expect to eat meat at the annual rate of 145 pounds per person for the rest of the year, compared with a 120 pound rate thus far.

The improved red meat situation is expected to have a favorable effect on civilian poultry supplies. Complete removal or a sharp reduction in the military set-aside on poultry production in the East and Mid-West probably soon will be announced.

Beef supplies in cold storage on Aug. 1 were the largest on record.

Central news said the Japanese commander at Nanchang was arranging for a peaceful surrender and asked the Chinese not to attack. Other Chinese units were prepared to enter Kungong, in northern Kwangtung, and Swatow, in eastern Kwangtung, when the surrender pact is signed.

Chinese troops also were reported to have entered Indo-China occupying Caobang, 100 miles north of Hanoi, and pushing on toward Hanoi and Langson.

Today's communique said Chinese troops entered Taiyuanfu, the capital of Shansi, and at least five other lesser towns.

SOME WORKERS MAY BE GIVEN SALARY BOOSTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—The bureau of internal revenue today modified its salary stabilization rules to permit limited increases in salaries, bonuses, commissions, fees, incentive pay and other types of compensation.

The modification, in accordance with a presidential order issued last Saturday, applies to all salaries below that figure paid to executives, administrators, professional workers who are not members of labor unions.

Such salaries now may be increased without permission provided price ceilings do not increase price ceilings, resist justifiable reductions in price ceilings, or increase the cost of government contracts.

If raises cannot meet these limitations, the employer must seek approval before granting them.

The order said employers who had applied for increases which are consistent with the new policy now may grant them without awaiting action on the applications.

Increases previously disapproved now may be granted without reapplication if they are within the limits of the new order.

ing an application with the department.

The Ross act originally was passed by the 95th general assembly over the bitter opposition of organized labor which charged that it was an effort to break down Ohio's labor standards.

The fight was renewed when the law was repealed by the last general assembly.

Lausche was thrown into the middle of the fight when he came out for the re-enactment of the law regardless of whether or not it carried a series of amendments sought by labor and members of his own democratic party.

His statements later were used as ammunition by the Republican majority when they finally pushed the bill through as an emergency measure after it first had failed to obtain the needed two-thirds majority in the house.

The Chamber of Commerce later credited Lausche with breaking the deadlock by getting several members of the Democratic side to vote for the emergency. That incident marked Lausche's first serious break with organized labor which largely was responsible for his election.

One hundred thousand were wounded and 200,000 "rendered homeless" at Hiroshima, where the world's first atomic bomb dropped in a parachute cradle to explode a terrific whirlpool of energy whose immediate effects were felt for 10 minutes, Tokyo radio said.

Two days later the second bomb hit a Urugami factory area to the north of Nagasaki station, Tokyo said.

"Although topographically parts of the city of Nagasaki did not receive the direct concussion from the explosion," roofs and windows of buildings "almost in the entire city" were blasted, the broadcast added.

COL. McCARTHY TO BE YOUNGEST BYRNES' AIDE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Col. Frank McCarthy of Richmond, Va., enters the State Department today as the newest and youngest member of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes' team of assistants.

The 33-year old McCarthy succeeds Julius C. Holmes as Assistant Secretary of State in charge of administration. His appointment was announced yesterday by President Truman as part of the current departmental reorganization.

McCarthy had been serving on the War Department general staff as military secretary to Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff. He accompanied Marshall to international conferences at London, Cussablanca, Algiers, Cairo, Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam, and won the Distinguished Service Medal for his services.

He also had served as liaison officer between the general staff and the White House since 1941. McCarthy was born in Richmond and graduated in 1933 from the Virginia Military Institute, Marshall's alma mater.

JAP DIPLOMATS FROM EUROPE HELD IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 22—Six Japanese diplomats who formerly served this government in Rome arrived here today with some 8,000 GI's aboard the transport USS Wakefield but were held incommunicado pending their transfer to an internment point in Pennsylvania.

On the same ship, which was one of two transports arriving today, were two members of the U. S. state department, believed to have been connected with the United Nations relief and rehabilitation commission.

WPB STARTING CHANGE-OVER TO PEACE PROGRAM

Plan To Speed Reconversion And Protect Essential Interests Outlined

reach store shelves about Thanksgiving.

The WPB pointed out that victory over Japan so reduced military requirements that the all-embracing wartime priorities system no longer was appropriate. As a matter of fact, it added, continuance would interfere with early reconversion. The new system was set up through a new priorities regulation which provides:

1. Cancellation immediately of virtually all "AA" preference ratings—which included all ratings except the top emergency priority AAA and the new military rating MM—on all purchases that call for delivery after Sept. 30. AA ratings will still apply to textiles, however, so that priority assistance can be given to those manufacturers willing to produce items on a selected list of 84 low-priced wearing apparel.
2. Revocation, effective Sept. 30, of the controlled materials plan under which WPB allocated certain portions of the output of basic metals for the production of munitions and essential civilian goods.
3. Cancellation at once of all allotments of steel, copper and aluminum for the fourth and subsequent quarters.
4. Introduction of a new "junior" civilian preference rating "CC", to be used in limited cases to break bottlenecks in reconversion and insure, when necessary, continued production and service.

WPB made it clear that its general policy will be not to assign priorities assistance for non-military needs. The new "junior" rating will be used sparingly. It is expected that almost all materials will be either in surplus or in comfortable supply.

To see that small business has an opportunity to obtain its fair share of materials, WPB officials were instructed that in considering applications for the new "CC" rating it is maintaining—and strengthening where necessary—its controls over inventories of scarce materials, particularly tin, rubber, lumber and textiles, to prevent hoarding.

"Fumbling" Charged By Republicans

the ball in the matter of making preparations for a quick reconversion from a war-time to a peace-time economy."

"Republicans in congress, and some Democrats as well, have been clamoring for a sensible and effective reconversion program for many months but the new deal, in control of both the White House and congress, has refused to listen."

It is possible, Brownell said, that the administration "planned it that way." It is a well-established new deal technique, he declared, "to capitalize on 'emergencies' by demanding billions of dollars to be spent in accordance with the whims of federal bureaucrats and to serve political purposes."

The Republican leader said the people also had "awakened to the seriousness of the danger" of long and uninterrupted control by one party.

"The people are convinced that the time has come to audit the new deal and they are turning to the Republican party as the logical and indeed the only available agency to conduct that audit."

Brownell said he had also found skepticism about the Truman administration's promises for economy in the federal government and resentment against "obvious efforts" of some administration officials to capitalize on the patriotism of veterans for political purposes.

REDS CAPTURE PUPPET RULER OF MANCHURIA

LONDON, Aug. 22—Russia announced the capture of Emperor Kang Teh, Japan's puppet ruler of Manchuria, and his imperial suite today.

Marshal Alexander M. Vasilievsky, Soviet far eastern commander, radioed the chief of staff of Japan's Kwangtung army that the emperor was "safe in my hands."

Vasilievsky's announcement was broadcast by Radio Khabarovsk, voice of the Soviet far eastern command, as Red armies captured 52,000 more Japanese officers and men, including four generals and the entire Japanese fifth Kwangtung army.

Kang Teh was the former Hsuan Tung, last emperor of the Manchu dynasty in China. Deposed in 1911, he took the name of Henry P'u Yi. The Japanese recalled him to power in 1932 and made him chief executive of what they called the independent state of Manchukuo, seized from China in 1931.

U. S. GENERAL GIVEN CONTROL MUKDEN CAMP

American Bomber Reported On Way To Bring Out Gen. Wainwright

little's historic first air raid on Tokyo in April 1942. None was identified, however.

At Weihsen in China's Shantung province, another parachute team were guests of liberated internees at a dance. There, too, the Swiss consul was cooperating. However, the Japanese commander for the area declined to permit American planes to land in the area immediately because of fears that the aircraft might be fired on by his troops.

Teams at all cities reported that prisoners and internees needed cigarettes, food rations, clothing, bandages, vitamins and toilet articles.

(Radio Tokyo, heard by the United Press in San Francisco, said that 36 American and British women internees, including 30 nuns, had been released from an unidentified internment camp.)

(Radio Tokyo also said that Japanese expeditionary forces in Indo-China had announced that Allied war prisoners and internees were being accorded "ample freedom" in regard to listening to the radio, reading newspapers and books and interviewing. Most guards have been removed, Tokyo said.)

THREE BOYS SENTENCED TO BIS BY JUDGE LAMB

Three thirteen-year-old boys who broke into the Nell Weldon residence, 211 South Scioto street, last Thursday, were sentenced to BIS in Lancaster by Judge Sterling M. Lamb Wednesday morning.

One of the boys, already on parole from BIS, was sent back. The other two were given suspended sentences, one on parole for 1 year, the other for 2 years.

TOUGH SS MEN PREPARE COURT FOR WAR TRIALS

NUERNBERG, Aug. 22—Tough German SS troopers are being set to work repairing and remodeling the great courtroom in Nuernberg where their former Nazi overlords are soon to go on trial for their lives as war criminals.

These once-haughty blackshirts who carried out the terroristic policies of the Hitler regime are working efficiently under American direction as stone masons, carpenters and hod carriers.

In their solitary cells within the gray stone prison behind the Nuernberg court, the Nazi leaders can hear the hammerings of their former minions at work.

The principal job on which the SS men are working is the enlargement of the court room by removal of its rear wall and the installation of a balcony, according to an American officer attached to the Allied war crimes commission.

One wing of the jail in the rear of the courthouse has been boarded off to provide complete isolation for the major war criminals who are waiting trial there.

JAP COMPULSORY WAR TRAINING SAID ABOLISHED

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 22—Radio Tokyo said today that Japan has abolished compulsory military training in schools and will lift restrictions soon on employment in peace-time industries. "Pupils and students previously drafted for labor service in war industry and for agricultural production have been demobilized and military training forced on them has been abolished," Tokyo said.

Another Japanese broadcast said agriculture probably will become Japan's most important "industry" as result of the Allied surrender terms. It appealed to the Japanese people to step up food production.

negative attitude toward sending representatives to supervise elections in those countries, pointing out the incompatibility of the measure with the principle of state independence and sovereignty over which such supervision is established," Izvestia said.

Outside supervision of elections within liberated countries would undermine rather than strengthen democracy, the newspaper contended.

Izvestia hinted that Russia might refuse to recognize the results of the Greek election because local conditions prevented a free expression of opinion.

"The Voulgaris government obviously wishes to cover up the real situation by a pretense of freedom and . . . by the prestige of supervisors from democratic countries," Izvestia said.

"The situation in Greece is characterized by an orgy of terrorism of Greek reactionary royalists and downright fascists."

COL. McCARTHY TO BE YOUNGEST BYRNES' AIDE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Col. Frank McCarthy of Richmond, Va., enters the State Department today as the newest and youngest member of Secretary of State James F. Byrnes' team of assistants.

The 33-year old McCarthy succeeds Julius C. Holmes as Assistant Secretary of State in charge of administration. His appointment was announced yesterday by President Truman as part of the current departmental reorganization.

McCarthy had been serving on the War Department general staff as military secretary to Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff. He accompanied Marshall to international conferences at London, Casablanca, Algiers, Cairo, Tehran, Yalta and Potsdam, and won the Distinguished Service Medal for his services.

He also had served as liaison officer between the general staff and the White House since 1941.

McCarthy was born in Richmond and graduated in 1933 from the Virginia Military Institute, Marshall's alma mater.

JAP DIPLOMATS FROM EUROPE HELD IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Aug. 22—Six Japanese diplomats who formerly served this government in Rome arrived here today with some 8,000 G.I.s aboard the transport USS Wakefield but were held incommunicado pending their transfer to an internment point in Pennsylvania.

On the same ship, which was one of two transports arriving today, were two members of the U. S. state department, believed to have been connected with the United Nations relief and rehabilitation commission.

$4 IN PENNIES STOLEN

Don White reported to police that someone broke into his store Tuesday night and took $4 in pennies. Another register nearby was not bothered, the report said.

WPB STARTING CHANGE-OVER TO PEACE PROGRAM

The WPB pointed out that victory over Japan so reduced military requirements that the all-embracing wartime priorities system no longer was appropriate. As a matter of fact, it added, continuance would interfere with early reconversion. The new system was set up through a new priorities regulation which provides:

1. Cancellation immediately of virtually all "AA" preference ratings—except the top emergency priority AAA and the new military rating MM—on all purchases that call for delivery after Sept. 30. AA ratings will still apply to textiles, however, so that priority assistance can be given to those manufacturers willing to produce items on a selected list of 84 low-priced wearing apparel.

2. Revocation, effective Sept. 30, of the controlled materials plan under which WPB allocated certain portions of the output of basic metals for the production of munitions and essential civilian goods.

3. Cancellation at once of all allotments of steel, copper and aluminum for the fourth and subsequent quarters.

4. Introduction of a new "junior" civilian preference rating "CC", to be used in limited cases to break bottlenecks in reconversion and insure, when necessary, continued production and service.

WPB made it clear that its general policy will be not to assign priorities assistance for non-military needs. The new "junior" rating will be used sparingly. It is expected that almost all materials will be either in surplus or in comfortable supply.

To see that small business has an opportunity to obtain its fair share of materials, WPB officials were instructed that in considering applications for the new "CC" rating it give special heed to the needs of small business.

The board also re-emphasized that it is maintaining—and strengthening where necessary—its controls over inventories of scarce materials, particularly tin, rubber, lumber and textiles, to prevent hoarding.

"Fumbling" Charged By Republicans

"Republicans in congress, and some Democrats as well, have been clamoring for a sensible and effective reconversion program for many months but the new deal, in control of both the White House and congress, has refused to listen."

It is possible, Brownell said, that the administration "planned it that way." It is a well-established new deal technique, he declared, "to capitalize on 'emergencies' by demanding billions of dollars to be spent in accordance with the whims of federal bureaucrats and to serve political purposes."

The Republican leader said the people also had "awakened to the seriousness of the danger" of long and uninterrupted control by one party.

"The people are convinced that the time has come to audit the new deal and they are turning to the Republican party as the logical and indeed the only available agency to conduct that audit."

Brownell said he had also found skepticism about the Truman administration's promises for economy in the federal government and resentment against "obvious efforts" of some administration officials to capitalize on the patriotism of veterans for political purposes.

REDS CAPTURE PUPPET RULER OF MANCHURIA

LONDON, Aug. 22—Russia announced the capture of Emperor Kang Teh, Japan's puppet ruler of Manchuria, and his imperial suite today.

Marshal Alexander M. Vassilevsky, Soviet far eastern commander, radioed the chief of staff of Japan's Kwangtung army that the emperor was "safe in my hands."

Vassilevsky's announcement was broadcast by Radio Khabarovsk, voice of the Soviet far eastern command, as Red armies captured 52,000 more Japanese officers and men, including four generals and the entire Japanese fifth Kwangtung army.

Kang Teh was the former Hsuan Tung, last emperor of the Manchu dynasty in China. Deposed in 1911, he took the name of Henry Pu Yi. The Japanese recalled him to power in 1932 and made him chief executive of what they called the independent state of Manchukuo, seized from China in 1931.

American Bomber Reported On Way To Bring Out Gen. Wainwright

At Weihien in China's Shantung province, another parachute team were guests of liberated internees at a dance. There, too, the Swiss consul was cooperating. However, the Japanese commander for the area declined to permit American planes to land in the area immediately because of fears that the aircraft might be fired on by his troops.

Teams at all cities reported that prisoners and internees needed cigarettes, food rations, clothing, bandages, vitamins and toilet articles.

(Radio Tokyo, heard by the United Press in San Francisco, said that 36 American and British women internees, including 30 nuns, had been released from an unidentified internment camp.)

(Radio Tokyo also said that Japanese expeditionary forces in Indo-China had announced that Allied war prisoners and internees were being accorded "ample freedom" in regard to listening to the radio, reading newspapers and books and interviewing. Most guards have been removed, Tokyo said.)

TOUGH SS MEN PREPARE COURT FOR WAR TRIALS

NUERNBERG, Aug. 22—Tough German SS troopers are being set to work repairing and remodeling the great courtroom in Nuernberg where their former Nazi overlords are soon to go on trial for their lives as war criminals.

These once-haughty blackshirts who carried out the terrorist policies of the Hitler regime are working efficiently under American direction as stone masons, carpenters and hod carriers.

In their solitary cells within the gray stone prison behind the Nuernberg court, the Nazi leaders can hear the hammerings of their former minions at work.

The principal job on which the SS men are working is the enlargement of the court room by removal of its rear wall and the installation of a balcony, according to an American officer attached to the Allied war crimes commission.

One wing of the jail in the rear of the courthouse has been boarded off to provide complete isolation for the major war criminals who are waiting trial there.

JAP COMPULSORY WAR TRAINING SAID ABOLISHED

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 22—Radio Tokyo said today that Japan has abolished compulsory military training in schools and will lift restrictions soon on employment in peace-time industries.

"Pupils and students previously drafted for labor service in war industry and for agricultural production have been demobilized and military training forced on them has been abolished," Tokyo said.

Another Japanese broadcast said agriculture probably will become Japan's most important "industry" as result of the Allied surrender terms. It appealed to the Japanese people to step up food production.

SOVIETS OBJECT TO SUPERVISING OF ELECTIONS

Izvestia Says Russia Has Flatly Rejected Proposals Of Western Allies

(Continued from Page One) negative attitude toward sending representatives to supervise elections in those countries, pointing out the incompatibility of this measure with the principle of state independence and sovereignty over which such supervision is established," Izvestia said.

Outside supervision of elections within liberated countries would undermine rather than strengthen democracy, the newspaper contended.

Izvestia hinted that Russia might refuse to recognize the results of the Greek election because local conditions prevented a free expression of opinion.

"The Voulgaris government obviously wishes to cover up the real situation by a pretense of freedom and... by the prestige of supervisors from democratic countries," Izvestia said.

"The situation in Greece is characterized by an orgy of terror of Greek reactionary royalists and downright fascists."

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, August 22—The drive of the spenders to stampede congress with depression pressure publicity is not making much headway yet. A couple of rather influential administration senators have talked around among their colleagues and reached two conclusions, (1) congress is apt to be tighter than before about money, and (2) the government just simply cannot provide everyone with a job, or the job he wants at the pay he wants.

Behind this resistance to the depression wolf-cry is a situation becoming increasingly plain even in the front page news. Mayor LaGuardia flailed the microphone the other day, for instance, with some cyclonic contentions that we are heading for a terrific unemployment, depression and what not from cancellation of war contracts, unless congress immediately does something—and he knew what had to be done, specifying more appropriations for bigger public works, including $1,250,000,000 of them in his own pocket. He also gave some financial advice, based on his inside information from the financial district that bondholders were dumping government securities.

The outside information from the financial district in the same newspapers a few pages away from LaGuardia gave not the slightest hint of depression. People who had their money, including life savings in stocks, were not selling them. Prices were not depressed, although the owners had heard the line offered by LaGuardia, not only for weeks, but all during the latter years of the war.

An exceptionally responsible financial authority, the committee for economic development, set forth simultaneously the result of a survey of industries, predicting only 552,000 persons able and willing to work would be unemployed, and employment in the country would total 53,448,000 the first full year—practically the 60,000,000 jobs Mr. Roosevelt wanted, if you consider the men left in the armed services.

INTERNATIONAL FRIENDSHIP
The Japs are licked, but still with us, to the extent of about 100,000,000 people, living apart from us in their own way, and capable of almost limitless good or evil. Presumably, as is the way of defeated people in any nation or group, they are sullen and resentful. And people in such a mood are always a peril to their neighbors.

We Americans and our allies are not called upon to go out of our way and coax these people, as if they were sulky children, to associate with us more closely. We have our own dignity and honor to maintain. But obviously it is to the advantage of both sides to get better acquainted and conduct ourselves in a more neighborly fashion. Knowing each other better, we would probably like each other better. The human animal seems to be made like that. Will Rogers, you may remember, said he "had never met a man he didn't like."

EMPTY? MOVE IN!
UNOCCUPIED houses in England and Wales are now subject to confiscation for families that need them. This drastic step is not the result of the recent Labor victory. It was taken by Winston Churchill and the Tories.

Under the new regulation owners leaving their houses empty are liable to have them requisitioned forthwith. They may move in themselves, but will have only 14 days in which to do so. If the owners' addresses are unknown, the government will go ahead after the expiration of the 14 days breathing spell.

What a commotion such governmental action would cause here!

WASHINGTON Report

Joe Davies May Be Next At Court of St. James'
By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Joseph E. Davies, recently special American emissary to Soviet Russia and England, has been offered one of the most prized of diplomatic posts—the ambassadorship to Great Britain.

Mr. Davies has been slightly hesitant about accepting the post tendered by President Truman, but his friends believe he will be the next U. S. representative at the Court of St. James'. Mr. Davies very much wanted to be Ambassador to Britain several years ago when his good friend Mr. Roosevelt was in the White House. But Mr. Roosevelt offered him Soviet Russia instead. At Moscow, Mr. Davies and his beautiful wife were successful and dramatic representatives.

Mr. Davies continued hoping that his next diplomatic post would be London. Instead, the next step was Belgium. Again a disappointment.

After these two diplomatic posts, Mr. Davies returned to this country and to the practice of law.

The talks between Japan and the Allies were kept from the people of Japan. They should have been kept from the people of the Allied countries until the peace was an accomplished fact.

State Departments and diplomats generally, with the best of intentions, do sometimes, somehow manage to mix up issues. Whenever I meet the sentence by ear or by eye, "There is unusual activity at the State Department," I think, "Heavens above, what are the boys up to now! What foreign country have they signed us up with! Or against?"

THERE'S A CHANCE THAT MEAT RATIONING may be lifted soon. Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, as handsome and alert a personality as the Truman cabinet boasts, believes in giving us rationless meat. Say about the middle of next week.

But Price Administrator Bowles wants to stick to ration points until around Christmas time. When Mr. Anderson and Mr. Bowles have talked the prospects over thoroughly, we may find a compromise that will lift the ban midway between now and New Year's.

THIS NEXT PARAGRAPH WAS NOT INSPIRED by Secretary Anderson—for which let us all be very grateful. But I did hear one person of authority say:

"I shouldn't be at all surprised, when Japan surrenders, to find that we will have to feed the Japanese people. Poor creatures! The war was not really of their making. It is our responsibility, perhaps, to look after them as we mean to look after the Germans."

"RE-DEPLOYMENT" is a word grown out of this war. It is applied in this particular moment to the movement about of troops and war supplies.

It seems to me that the word might be applied also to the results we have achieved in our fight to save humanity. We have succeeded principally in "re-deploying" misery and hate and hunger and fear.

The Enlarged Spleen—Causes for This Condition

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

THE spleen, which is located in the left, upper part of the abdomen, often may become enlarged. The exact function of the spleen is not known. As a general rule, in normal persons, the spleen cannot be felt through the wall of the abdomen. However, when it becomes enlarged, it is possible to feel it and, in such instances, the spleen is said to be palpable.

Enlargement of the spleen may be brought on by a number of disorders. For example, it may occur in leukemia, cirrhosis of the liver, a disease of the blood called Banti's disease and also when there are infections of the liver such as epidemic hepatitis. Malaria and typhoid fever also cause splenic enlargement.

Patients Examined

In a large number of patients with enlargement of the spleen who were examined by Doctor William F. Lipp and his co-workers of New York, a definite cause for the splenic enlargement could not be found. Some of the patients had gall bladder disease and gallstones. It is generally believed that some damage to the liver occurs in gallbladder infections, and it may be that the liver infection is responsible in cases of gall bladder disease for the fact that the spleen enlarges in size.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

"You—you think of everything," Bill seemed much impressed. "You drove the car..."

No outsider saw me; I looked up and down the road to make sure. Perhaps you think I should have sent 'Doc' August? 'Doc' hasn't the courage, and August is on the stupid side; I was the only one who would make sure that the threat to everything was silenced."

"Le Belle Dame Sans Merci," Bill murmured.

She drew back, a candle flame of doubt in her eyes. "Ha, joking again, and not a pretty joke! My Bill, it wasn't a question of mercy, but of disconcerting necessity."

Fool you, his inner voice cautioned, must you imperil all that has been done? "One spy has ruined campaigns, lost a war"—Carlotta's often repeated words. Weigh that against a life that was almost ended!

No necessity at all, he said softly, you are too valuable; it was too great risk. You should have sent me! Prone as I am, in other situations arises you will call on me." He was glad to see her coolness vanish with his words.

"But I wasn't sure of you," "What?"

"It has been drilled into me for years: Kill father, mother, sister, brother—anyone who interferes with our great destiny! And kill without compunction! You have a soft spot or so, Bill... your lack of rigid training in the past. Ach, I know you'll get over it! But your words just now, Lady Without Mercy, told me your first reaction."

"But it was a man's job," he insisted.

"There is no masculine or feminine in Nazi warfare."

"But I just can't help thinking of you as a woman," Steuben wet his lips, which were dry. "Under your tutelage I have come a long way, Carlotta."

Exhilaration rose in her cheeks, ardent approval lighted her eyes. She seemed about to speak, then swung about, hearing a servant in the lower hall. She motioned that she must go now and play her role of invalid. . . . The key turned in the lock.

The ban on activity was not lifted until the following Monday, and even then extra caution prevailed in Carlotta's "Tower." The black-out was still maintained but, with the long spring evenings, that was only a slight inconvenience. Bill had no lesson with Carlotta, but Herr Friedrich drilled him most of the day in a code of window shade lowering for use in the bomb-sight factory; and other signaling methods.

Nazis in and about the shop would have the third button of their shirts missing. Passwords, inserted in casual conversation, would prove authentically to each other. . . .

When did he leave? Herr Friedrich threw out his hands in an empty gesture. He didn't know—today, tomorrow, a month. . . .

After dark, "Doc" took Bill downstairs for his first exercise in five days, and told him that he could circle the house and barn ten times. "Figure that's a mile."

"Is she still—sick?"

"She was up and around today." "Was there any trouble over the weekend? Did anyone come to question us?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," snapped "Doc" who had taken off his shoes to rest his feet. "Steuben set off on his limited stroll. From the garden path Bill could see a gleam coming from the Lawrence house, one that might come from a room in which Eleanor sat. . . . He gazed wishfully along the beam."

Bill was returning from his fourth round when he slowed his steps, stopped altogether beside a henhouse. Two men were slouching up the drive. They hesitated, conferred a few yards away.

"What do you want?" asked "Doc" from the shadows.

They came forward at once, passing Bill—unhappy young fellows, one tall, the other stocky. Both had level jutting brows over eyes that blazed in the dim light. The tall one said in a cautious voice, "Does anyone named Jones live here? We've been on the march for three nights."

"B. S. Jones," muttered the other, and added with stress: "There are no islands any more."

"Doc" ran up the steps in his stocking feet. Bill heard him cackle, "Why didn't you say that at first?" as he let them in. "Mrs. Jones will be glad to see you."

"There are no islands any more" was a password, of course. Men who had beaten three nights getting here—who could they be? Agents landed by plane or submarine to wreak evil in this country? Obvious as a highway signboard!

By chance he had seen them. How many others had come after night-fall during these weeks?

The light which Bill saw in the Lawrence home did come from Eleanor's room, where she had written: "Dear Sir: I have had no report from your agent for over three weeks. He must be unable to send further word. This morning I was followed. They suspect me, I am sure."

She had hesitated about adding, "I have a plan of my own to gather information and shall report soon," but had omitted it. She stamped and addressed it, and hurried back to the Tyrells, who were making a call. She asked the Major to mail it.

After the Tyrells left, Eleanor bolted the door and went about trying all the windows to see if they were locked. She was turning off the living room lights when the telephone rang.

"Miss Elmer Lawrence?" a man asked.

"All alone, ain't you?" gibed the voice, patently disguised. "How about my coming over for a little while?" He broke into laughter, maniacal and blood-chilling.

"I am not alone," cried Eleanor. "There are people here with guns. And police—" Weir laughter interrupted her, in a panic she banged down the receiver.

A shaking shell of herself, she climbed the stairs, holding to the rail. The call, timed when her strength would be lowest, her fears rampant, a Nazi trick to frighten her. An effort to shatter her nerves. A device to drive her away, to get rid of her. . . .

A half-hour later, the telephone peeped once more.

"Don't answer it!" Eleanor warned Mamie. "It's a crazy man calling."

"Oh my heart-to-goodness!" In her blue cotton gown, Mamie stood in the doorway, her dark face anxious. "All this war stuff—Sure you ain't got a fever, Miss Elmer?"

Eleanor was breathing hard. "Told him—men were here—with guns!" Her eyes shone wildly. "Have a gun—see here, Mamie." She took a revolver from under the pillow, one of her father's old .38's.

"Hand out, Mamie advanced into the room. You give that to me, Elmer! Your papa's, isn't it? You're in no condition to mess with that."

Eleanor handed it over meekly. The old woman patted her gently. "Sleep now, my pretty—no one's going to hurt us."

Wednesday morning, the second day after the alarm tinkled at 3:45 a. m. Eleanor already awake, pulled the lever, hushing it. She dressed in slacks, a shirt and sweater, tennis shoes. She tiptoed down the stairs and in the kitchen she made coffee and put bread in the toaster.

Mamie would be alarmed by her absence, so she wrote on the grocery pad: "Gone to sketch the sunrise. Will be back before Sukey goes to school." That would satisfy the old dear! She might be back before Mamie was up, but she shouldn't take more than two hours.

In Art's khaki fishing creel, which she would carry, was a flashlight and the revolver which she had retrieved from Mamie's shoe bag last night.

On recent mornings she had been followed by a stranger who carried a tree hook in his hand, an ugly weapon. Now and then he had snipped a branch. Further enmity had been in his small, mean eyes; his pursuit was obvious.

She drank a second cup of coffee hurriedly. Off she must go, her last adventure. . . .

Tying a handkerchief around her hair, Eleanor heard bare feet coming down the back stairs. Mamie opened the door, her eyes dazed by the bright light in the kitchen. "What are you up to?"

"I couldn't sleep, so I'm taking a walk to watch the sunrise from the top of November."

Mamie grabbed the sack and felt it. "Got the gun, ain't you? All right, I'm saying nothing."

"I'll be back before eight. I-I don't like it out here at night any more. We'll sleep at the Tyrells from now on, starting tonight. So this will be my last walk out here. We're moving."

The old woman nodded. "Better—calm us all down—all this Nazi doin's gettin' on nerves."

As the girl padded down the driveway, Mamie called after her, "Wish you wouldn't go!"

"The Authority on Authorities"

THE CRUCIAL PERIOD

AS THE play of a hand gets down near the close and the few cards you have left are in a tenuous position, you had better get on your toes and watch closely. Otherwise you may find the opponent putting over a lead—throwing end-play on you. Correct solution of your problem then may be the very simple matter of merely deciding which trick you want to take—the current trick or the next one. The situation may be so crucial that the entire fate of the contract depends on your answer to that question.

Even with the good fortune of having the double finesse in diamonds laid just right, plus the spade A being fortuitously under the K, South still was in such an overbid condition that off-hand he seems destined to lose two tricks each in the black suits. If everything had lain wrong for him, he could have lost three tricks in spades, two in diamonds and two in clubs, going down four. But, in addition to the luck of honor location, he was helped by a bad defensive play which enabled him to make his contract.

West ripped off two clubs and South ruffed the third. He led to the heart A, finessed the diamond 10, led to the heart J and finessed the diamond Q, cleared trumps with the heart K, and played the diamond A. He noticed that on the heart K West discarded the club 2, and on the diamond A discarded the club 9, his last of the suit. Four spades were thus retained by West.

South thereupon led the spade 3, hoping West had the A and would play it. He did. Then he regretted it. He had to lead from his guarded Q into South's combination tenace of the K in dummy and the J in the closed hand, so West could not possibly get another trick. If he had played low on the spade 3 and let the K win, the next lead of the suit would have been to him and not from him. It would have given him two spade tricks, the second of which would have beaten the contract.

SWITZERLAND, TOO

"DON'T leave us out". This is the Swiss Socialists' reaction to the suggestion that German territory in the West might be annexed to the Netherlands in payment for damage done. The Socialists ask for part of Germany near the Swiss canton of Schaffhausen, sweetening the pill by calling it a mere "straightening out of the frontier." The demand is caused by Germany's great indebtedness to Switzerland, not likely to be repaid in any other way.

This is not yet an official Swiss demand. The President of the Grand Council dreads the suggestion until it should be made by the Germans of the region affected, saying: "In a century or so Germany can be reborn, and at that time can reproach us, her neighbors, with having exploited her desperate situation today to suit our own needs."

Wise words, which might be profitably remembered by other countries than Switzerland.

The spenders thus are having a difficult time trying to make out the hopeless case necessary to get themselves more free government money. LaGuardia further claimed "congress has done nothing", a claim any congressman can explode to full ridiculousness by adding up the $27,200,000,000 in the spending program already authorized mainly by them, a total three times the height of the Roosevelt free spending programs, when the federal debt was a small fraction of the $265,000,000,000 it was at the close of the war (including Army-Navy allowances, public works, food control, state unemployment compensation funds, lend-lease, export-import bank, etc.) The wilting Little Flower who apparently is generating some hopes for personal but not a patriotic national revival also admonished citizens not to spend their money—and thus furnish jobs—but to keep their bonds and buy as little as possible. This seems to be a defeatist policy generated by motives beyond my imagination or ability to reason. That kind of advice would force people out of jobs and create unemployment. To do that would scuttle the economic equilibrium of the country. Is LaGuardia so eager for more (Continued on Page Six)

In a large number of patients with enlargement of the spleen who were examined by Doctor William F. Lipp and his co-workers of New York, a definite cause for the splenic enlargement could not be found. Some of the patients had gall bladder disease and gallstones. It is generally believed that some damage to the liver occurs in gallbladder infections, and it may be that the liver infection is responsible in cases of gall bladder disease for the fact that the spleen enlarges in size.

A number of patients had viscerotropism, which means that the organs of the abdomen had dropped out of their normal position. In such instances, the spleen itself is normal but can be felt only because it is not in its usual place within the abdominal cavity. Some of the patients had had conditions in the past which may have accounted for the splenic enlargement. For example, some had typhoid fever; others had suffered from jaundice, and still others were accustomed to the excessive use of alcoholic beverages.

Feeling Spleen

In making a complete physical examination, the doctor always attempts to ascertain if the spleen can be felt. If he finds that this is possible, the next step is to determine whether the spleen is enlarged or normal in size and just out of its usual position. If he finds that it is enlarged, he will attempt to determine the cause for it. In doing this a careful study of the blood is important.

Often the cause for the enlargement will be found in some disorder which the patient has had in earlier life. However, every case of enlarged spleen deserves careful study. Then the proper treatment may be carried out depending on what has caused the spleen to increase in size.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

"You—think of everything." Bill seemed much impressed. "You drove the car..."

"No outsider saw me; I looked up and down the road to make sure. Perhaps you think I should have sent 'Doc' or August? 'Doc' hasn't the courage, and August is on the stupid side; I was the only one who would make sure that the threat to everything was silenced."

"Le Belle Dame Sans Merci," Bill murmured.

She drew back, a candle flame of doubt in her eyes. "Ha, joking again, and not a pretty joke! My Bill, it wasn't a question of mercy, but of disagreeable necessity."

"Fool you, his inner voice cautioned, must you imperil all that has been done? 'One spy has ruined campaigns, lost a war'—Carlotta's often repeated words. Weigh that against a life that was almost ended!"

"No necessity at all," he said softly, "you are too valuable; it was too great a risk. You should have sent me! Promise that if another situation arises you will call on me." He was glad to see her coolness vanish with his words.

"But I wasn't sure of you."

"What?"

"It has been drilled into me for years: Kill father, mother, sister, brother—anyone who interferes with our great destiny! And kill without compunction! You have a soft spot or so, Bill... your lack of rigid training in the past. Ah, I know you'll get over it! But your words just now, Lady Without Mercy, told me your real reaction."

"But it was a man's job," he insisted.

"There is no masculine or feminine in Nazi warfare."

"But I just can't help thinking of you as a woman." Steuben wet his lips, which were dry. "Under your tutelage I have come a long way, Carlotta."

Exhilaration rose in her cheeks, ardent approval lighted her eyes. She seemed about to speak, then swung about, hearing a servant in the lower hall. She motioned that she must go now and play her role of invalid. . . . The key turned in the lock.

The ban on activity was not lifted until the following Monday, and even then extra caution prevailed in Carlotta's "Tower." The blackout was still maintained, but, with the long spring evenings, that was only a slight inconvenience. Bill had no lesson with Carlotta, but Herr Friedrich drilled him most of the day in a code of window shade lowering for use in the bomb-sight factory; and other signifying methods.

Nazis in and about the shop would have the third button of their shirts missing. Passwords, inserted in casual conversation, would prove authenticity to each other. . . .

When did he leave? Herr Friedrich threw out his hands in an empty gesture. He didn't know—today, tomorrow, a month. . . .

After dark, "Doc" took Bill downstairs for his first exercise in five days, and told him that he could circle the house and barn ten times. "Figure that's a mile."

"Is she still—sick?"

"She was up and around today." "Was there any trouble over the weekend? Did anyone come to question us?"

"I don't know what you're talking about," snapped "Doc" who had taken off his shoes to rest his feet. Steuben set off on his limited stroll. From the garden path Bill could see a gleam coming from the Lawrence house, and that night came from a room in which Eleonore sat. . . . He gazed wishfully along the beam.

Bill was returning from his fourth round when he slowed his steps, stopped altogether beside a hemlock. Two men were slouching up the drive. They hesitated, conferred a few yards away.

"What do you want?" rasped "Doc" from the shadows.

"They came forward at once, passing Bill—unabashed on young, tall, the other stocky. Both had level jutting brows over eyes that blazed in the dim light. The tall one said in a cautious voice, "Does anyone named Jones live here? We've been on the march for three nights."

"B. S. Jones," muttered the other, and added with stress: "There are no islands any more."

"Doc" ran up the steps in his stocking feet. Bill heard him cackle, "Why didn't you say that at first?" as he let them in. "Mrs. Jones will be glad to see you."

"There are no islands any more" was a password, of course. Men who had been three nights getting here—who could they be? Agents landed by plane or submarine to wreak evil in this country? Obvious as a highway signboard.

By chance he had seen them. How many others had come after night-fall during these weeks?

The light which Bill saw in the Lawrence house did come from Eleonore's room, where she had written: "Dear Sir: I have had no report from your agent for over three weeks. He must be unable to send further word. This morning I am followed. They suspect me, I am sure."

She had hesitated about adding, "I have a plan of my own to gather information and shall report soon," but had omitted it. She stamped and addressed it, and hurried back to the Tyrells, who were making a call. She asked the Major to mail it.

After the Tyrells left, Eleonore bolted the door and went about trying all the windows to see if they were locked. She was turning off the living room lights when the telephone rang.

"Miss El'ner Lawrence?" a man asked.

"All alone, ain't you?" glibbed the voice, patently disguised. "How about my coming over for a little while?" He broke into laughter, maniacal and blood-chilling.

"I am not alone," cried Eleonore. "There are people here—with guns. And police—" Weir laughter interrupted her; in a panic she banged down the receiver.

A shaking shell of herself, she climbed the stairs, holding to the rail. The call, timed when her strength would be lowest, her fears rampant, a Nazi trick to frighten her. An effort to shatter her nerves. A device to drive her away, to get rid of her. . . .

A half-hour later, the telephone peeped once more.

"Don't answer it!" Eleonore warned Mamie. "It's a crazy man calling."

"Oh my heart-to-goodness!" In her white cotton gown, Mamie stood in the doorway, her dark face anxious. "All this war stuff—Sure you ain't got a fever, Miss El'ner?"

Eleonore was breathing hard. "Told him—men were here—with guns!" Her eyes shone wildly. "Have a gun—see here, Mamie. She took a revolver from under the pillow, one of her father's old .38's.

Hand out, Mamie advanced into the room. "You give that to me, El'ner! Your papa's, isn't it? You're in no condition to mess with that!"

Eleonore handed it over meekly. The old woman patted her gently. "Sleep now, my pretty—no one's going to hurt us."

Wednesday morning, the second day after the alarm tinkled at 5:45 a. m. Eleonore already awake, pulled the lever, hushing it. She dressed in slacks, a shirt and sweater, tennis shoes. She tipped down the stairs and as the kitchen she made coffee and put bread in the toaster.

Mamie would be alarmed by her absence, so she wrote on the grocery pad: "Gone to sketch the sunrise. Will be back before Sukey goes to school." That would satisfy the old dear! She might be back before Mamie was up. It shouldn't take more than two hours.

In Art's khaki fishing creel, which she would carry, was a flashlight and the revolver which she had retrieved from Mamie's shoe bag last night.

On recent mornings she had been followed by a stranger who carried a tree hook in his hand, an ugly weapon. Now and then he had snipped a branch. Furtive enemy he had been in his small, mean eyes; his pursuit was obvious.

She drank a second cup of coffee hurriedly. Off she must go, her last adventure. . . .

Tying a handkerchief around her hair, Eleonore heard bare feet coming down the back stairs. Mamie opened the door, her eyes dazed by the bright light in the kitchen. "What are you up to?"

"I couldn't sleep, so I'm taking a walk to watch the sunrise from the top of November."

Mamie grabbed the sack and felt it. "Got the gun, ain't you? All right, I'm saying nothing."

"I'll be back before eight. I—I don't like it out here at night any more. We'll sleep at the Tyrells from now on, starting tonight. So this will be my last walk out here. We're moving."

The old woman nodded. "Better—calm us all down—all this Nazi doin's gettin' on nerves."

As the girl padded down the driveway, Mamie called after her, "Wish you wouldn't go!" (To be continued)

THE CRUCIAL PERIOD

AS THE play of a hand gets down near the close and the few cards you have left are in a tense position, you had better get on your toes and watch closely. Otherwise you may find the opponent putting over a lead-throwing end-play on you. Correct solution of your problem then may be the very simple matter of merely deciding—the current trick or the next one. The situation may be so crucial that the entire fate of the contract depends on your answer to that question.

WASHINGTON Report

Joe Davies May Be Next At Court of St. James'

"A Jap Burns" Is War's Most Horrible Picture

By HELEN ESSARY
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON—Joseph E. Davies, recently special American emissary to Soviet Russia and England, has been offered one of the most prized of diplomatic posts—the ambassadorship to Great Britain.

Mr. Davies has been slightly hesitant about accepting the post tendered by President Truman, but his friends believe he will be the next U. S. representative at the Court of St. James'.

Mr. Davies very much wanted to be Ambassador to Britain several years ago when his good friend Mr. Roosevelt was in the White House. But Mr. Roosevelt offered him Soviet Russia instead. At Moscow, Mr. Davies and his beautiful wife were successful and dramatic representatives.

Mr. Davies continued hoping that his next diplomatic post would be London. Instead, the next step was Belgium. Again a disappointment.

After these two diplomatic posts, Mr. Davies returned to this country and to the practice of law.

Mr. Truman has sent him on special missions—one to London—for the purpose of smoothing the path that the United Nations Charter and the Potsdam Conference must take.

So effective was Mr. Davies as a one-man emissary that Mr. Truman decided he should represent the administration in London.

Mr. Davies' hesitation about accepting the post has resulted from a lingering chagrin at his earlier disappointments.

Mr. and Mrs. Davies would do a skillful and gracious job at the Court of St. James'. Mrs. Davies is beautiful and clever and has great wealth. Mr. Davies has already proved his ability as a diplomat. The appointment would be a popular one.

MUCH OF THE CONFUSION AND UNEASINESS caused by the delay in the surrender of Japan might have been spared the United States and the Allies generally if no mention had been made of Japan's first note until all negotiations were completed.

It was not necessary to tell our people anything until it could be said definitely that the war was over.

Surely there had been strict censorship over matters of far less importance. Remember when it was not permitted to mention the presence of a ship that was in a harbor visible to thousands of people? There have been hundreds of other restrictions. The press, the radio and the people obeyed all these without too much of a tremor.

The talks between Japan and the Allies were kept from the people of Japan. They should have been kept from the people of the Allied countries until the peace was an accomplished fact.

State Departments and diplomats generally, with the best of intentions, do sometimes, somehow manage to mix up issues. Whenever I meet the sentence by ear or by eye, "There is unusual activity at the State Department," I think, "Heavens above, what are the boys up to now! What foreign country have they signed up with! Or against?"

THERE'S A CHANCE THAT MEAT RATIONING may be lifted soon. Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, as handsome and alert a personality as the Truman cabinet boasts, believes in giving us rationless meat. Say about the middle of next week.

But Price Administrator Bowles wants to stick to ration points until around Christmas time. When Mr. Anderson and Mr. Bowles have talked the prospects over thoroughly, we may find a compromise that will lift the ban midway between now and New Year's.

THIS NEXT PARAGRAPH WAS NOT INSPIRED by Secretary Anderson—for which let us all be very grateful. But I did hear one person of authority say:

"I shouldn't be at all surprised, when Japan surrenders, to find that we will have to feed the Japanese people. Poor creatures! The war was not really of their making. It is our responsibility, perhaps, to look after them as we mean to look after the Germans."

"RE-DEPLOYMENT" is a word grown out of this war. It is applied in this particular moment to the movement about of troops and war supplies.

It seems to me that the word might be applied also to the results we have achieved in our fight to save humanity. We have succeeded principally in "re-deploying" misery and hate and hunger and fear.

A symbol of the "good" we have brought about is that delicate souvenir of our fight with Japan: "A Jap Burns."

Perhaps you saw "A Jap Burns" in the movies. Or in the newspapers or magazines.

The first glimpse of this example of the freedom-from-fear we promised the world shows a flame-thrower aiming at a Jap. The flame hits the mark. The Jap's clothes are on fire. He is on fire. He is writhing on the ground, burning alive in death agony. Finally he is finished and still, a dead cinder. Meanwhile a Signal Corps photographer grinds and grinds his movie camera. The world today—and posterity, too—may see what vicious stuff conquerors are made of.

ARMY PRIVATE IS HANGED FOR SLAYING BUDDY

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Aug. 22—Pvt. Edward J. Reichl, 39-year-old Chicago GI, was hanged early today for slaying an Army buddy during a drunken spree at Gualala, Calif.

Reichl's last words were a goodbye to Chicago, the city of his birth, described by the prosecution during his trial as "killers' paradise" and "the place where they shoot a man, then step calmly over his body to eat dinner."

"Goodbye Chicago, I love every street and alley in Chicago," Reichl yelled defiantly as the noose was slipped over his neck.

He entered the death chamber clad in his army uniform, minus a tie, but wearing his cap at a jaunty angle. The trap was sprung at 12:08 a. m. CWT, and 16 minutes later he was pronounced dead.

Reichl, denied an appeal for executive clemency in the fatal shooting of Pvt. Adam Bucholz, 35, Dayton, O., Nov. 17, 1943, appeared nervous as he was led toward the gallows. He interrupted with a slight cough when Col. William S. Eley, commandant, read the death sentence.

FT. LEAVENWORTH, Kan., Aug. 22—Pvt. Edward J. Reichl, 39-year-old Chicago GI, was hanged early today for slaying an Army buddy during a drunken spree at Gualala, Calif.

"Goodbye Chicago. I love every street and alley in Chicago," Reichl yelled defiantly as the noose was slipped over his neck.

He entered the death chamber clad in his army uniform, minus a tie, but wearing his cap at a jaunty angle. The trap was sprung at 12:08 a. m. CWT, and 16 minutes later he was pronounced dead.

Senators Wagner and Murray, (who are not the two unidentified senators quoted at the outset, but generally working along the CIO road with LaGuardia) came out of a White House conference saying Mr. Truman favored their bill to give every man a government job if he does not find another one (cost unestimated) and boost the unemployment compensation. However, other senators say privately Mr. Truman inherited this program from Mr. Roosevelt and thought he should go along with it. They noted that so far he has not however joined the LaGuardia-CIO depression stampede.

Last year's pennant-winning Milwaukee Brewers won both games of a double-header yesterday to move within a half game of first-place Indianapolis club in the American Association standings.

Owen Scheetz went the route for the Brewers in the seven-inning opener for a 4 to 2 win. Columbus' pitcher-manager Charley Root held Milwaukee to six hits but his teammates were unable to score. The Brewers staged a repeat performance in the nightcap which they won 7 to 3.

Indianapolis lost a heartbreaking 7 to 6 contest to the St. Paul Saints but continued to hold a slight lead in the Association pennant race. Tom Sunkel was the winning pitcher.

In the other circuit games, Toledo defeated last place Kansas City, 9 to 4, and Minneapolis scored a smashing 12 to 3 triumph over Louisville.

The one-wheel auto would also be jet propelled. Since there is no mention of brakes the contraption sounds like a ready-made accident on its way to happen.

CLOSE BATTLES PLAYED IN PARK

Only Nine Hits Allowed As Circle City And Blue Ribbon Win

A total of nine hits and eight runs were recorded Tuesday night in the doubleheader Night Softball league program at Ted Lewis park.

Blue Ribbon defeated Coca Cola 2-1 and Circle City won 5-0 from Richards Implement.

In the second game Blue Ribbon got only two hits off C. Hill while Coca Cola was getting three off H. Wellington. Coca Cola scored its runs in the fifth on no hits, errors accounting for the tally. Blue Ribbon came back in the last half to score two runs on a double by J. Gregg, an error and a couple of infield outs.

Elliott pitched a one-hitter for Circle City in the opener, Spangler ruining a no-hitter with a loop to right in the fifth inning.

Circle City got only three hits off Yodling but took advantage of walks and errors to score twice in the third and three times in the fourth. Two walks, an error and two infield outs accounted for the third inning markers. Kenny's double after three walks and two errors was the only hit in the three run fourth inning.

Wednesday night the schedule calls for Jaycees and Blue Ribbon to play at 8 and Purina and Richards Implement at 9:15. Thursday night the official schedule is to end with Stansbury-Stout playing Circle City and Williamsport opposing Blue Ribbon.

CLOSE BATTLES PLAYED IN PARK

Only Nine Hits Allowed As Circle City And Blue Ribbon Win

A total of nine hits and eight runs were recorded Tuesday night in the doubleheader Night Softball league program at Ted Lewis park.

Blue Ribbon defeated Coca Cola 2-1 and Circle City won 5-0 from Richards Implement.

In the second game Blue Ribbon got only two hits off C. Hill while Coca Cola was getting three off H. Wellington. Coca Cola scored its runs in the fifth on no hits, errors accounting for the tally. Blue Ribbon came back in the last half to score two runs on a double by J. Gregg, an error and a couple of infield outs.

Elliott pitched a one-hitter for Circle City in the opener, Spangler ruining a no-hitter with a loop to right in the fifth inning.

Circle City got only three hits off Young but took advantage of walks and errors to score twice in the third and three times in the fourth. Two walks, an error and two infield outs accounted for the third inning markers. Kenny's double after three walks and two errors was the only hit in the three run fourth inning.

Wednesday night the schedule calls for Jaycees and Blue Ribbon to play at 8 and Purina and Richards Implement at 9:15. Thursday night the official schedule is to end with Stansbury-Stout playing Circle City and Williamsport opposing Blue Ribbon.

BREWERS TAKE TWO GAMES FROM COLUMBUS BIRDS

Last year's pennant-winning Milwaukee Brewers won both games of a double-header yesterday to move within a half game of first-place Indianapolis club in the American Association standings.

Owen Scheetz went the route for the Brewers in the seven-inning opener for a 4 to 2 win. Columbus' pitcher-manager Charley Root held Milwaukee to six hits but his teammates were unable to score. The Brewers staged a repeat performance in the nightcap which they won 7 to 3.

Indianapolis lost a heartbreaking 7 to 6 contest to the St. Paul Saints but continued to hold a slight lead in the Association pennant race. Tom Sunkel was the winning pitcher.

In the other circuit games, Toledo defeated last place Kansas City, 9 to 4, and Minneapolis scored a smashing 12 to 3 triumph over Louisville.

The one-wheel auto would also be jet propelled. Since there is no mention of brakes the contraption sounds like a ready-made accident on its way to happen.

ARLENE IS BUSY
Arlene Francis, the romantic referee of "Blind Date" show, has so many dates herself that she doesn't know how she's going to keep them. Recently, she returned with the "Blind Date" troupe from Hollywood, and now cinema bigwigs are trying to lure Arlene back to make a movie. Moreover, she has been paged from London to do a stage play there with her friend, Constance Cummings, whenever her radio contracts here will allow her time for the trip. In addition, Arlene is trying to make room in her schedule for a Broadway play!

RADIO NEWS NOTES
The producer of "Men of Vision" Sunday nights is really a man of vision. Just four days after a P-80 jet-propelled Lockheed "Shooting Star" winged from Dayton, O., to La Guardia Field, New York, in 62 minutes, the program brought to the air details on the construction and performance of this miracle of the skies. It is appropriate that radio, now that the U. S. is the world's greatest airpower, should have a series like "Men of Vision," dedicated to telling how we have come a long way in aeronautics.

since August 1, 1907 when the Army established its air arm.

The "Beulah" program, starring Marlin Hurt, now heard Mondays at 9 will be heard at a new time on Saturdays beginning August 26.

"The Doctor Fights," Tuesday Summer series show, has won a War Department long distance telephone priority to arrange the interviews with doctors at the close of the show. These are usually cut into the program from points hundreds and even thousands of miles away from the Hollywood studios where the broadcast originates.

Hans Spialek, arranger on "Great Moments in Music" Wednesday nights, has been signed as arranger for the Broadway musical, "Polonaise." And Jeff Alexander, chorus director on the same radio series, has been pacted to do the vocal arrangements.

To Guy Lombardo goes the signal honor of introducing the first music written by Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II for a motion picture. There are five songs in "State Fair." Guy introduced three of them on one of his "Musical Autographs" programs. They are: "That's For Me," "It's

Three Ordinances Introduced At City Council Meeting

STREET REPAIR LEGISLATION IN FIRST READING

Councilmen Discuss Plans To Extend Water Mains In South End

An ordinance amending annual appropriation ordinance No. 3222 was given first reading at city council meeting Tuesday night. The ordinance called for $5,500 for labor and materials in the auto street repair fund and $200 for tools and equipment in the auto street repair fund to be paid by transferring that amount from the general fund.

An ordinance giving sewage disposal plant employees a bonus of $10 per month in addition to their regular monthly salary and a present $15 monthly bonus, was given first hearing.

Another amendment to appropriation ordinance 3222 to include $94 for insurance on a shelter house at Ted Lewis park was given first reading.

A resolution, passed by vote of 4-1, gave the Norfolk and Western railway company permission to raise their tracks at several points in the corporate limits of Cincinnati.

It was explained by George L. Crites that the rails would not be any higher than they were originally, since they would only be lifted back to original levels. The tracks have sunk from the terrific pounding they have taken, and have displaced much ballast.

Boyd Horn, councilman from the fourth ward, objected to the rails being raised across South Court street. Mr. Horn objected that the tracks were already too high, but other councilmen said driving across the crossing will be easier.

Second reading was given to an ordinance approving salary increases for sewer rental funds collector and parking meter servicemen.

State highway department was granted permission by council to enter city property for the purpose of constructing a bridge over Hargus creek on North Scioto street.

The department also asked permission to do some construction work in Ted Lewis park and playground. The request was presented as a resolution and approved by the five councilmen present.

Councilmen directed City Solicitor Joe Adkins to prepare an ordinance giving the Ohio Water Service company permission to install a 6-inch water main on Long avenue between Ohio and Corwin street, and on Long avenue between Washington and Clinton streets, and on Edison avenue, from Court to Pickaway streets.

Ordinance, councilmen agreed, will stipulate that a fire plug is to be installed in the center of the block on Edison avenue.

The decision to have the water mains installed came after a lengthy discussion in which several instances were cited in which city councilmen had asked the service company to give these sections of Cincinnati water service. The service company's refusal to do so in 1942 resulted in a case of typhoid, due to residents in that section using water from a condemned well, councilmen said.

At the previous council meeting, two letters from the Ohio Water Service company were read, and some discussion was given them. Tuesday night these letters were read to the council again, and Solicitor Adkins cited the times, giving accurate dates, when the commissioners had asked for water service and been refused by the service company.

The ordinance will probably be prepared and presented for a first reading at the next council meeting.

WAR PLANTS GO TO THOSE WHO PLAN MOST JOBS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—If you want to buy one of Uncle Sam's tank plants to make better mouse traps, you'll pay the price of a good mouse trap factory and not the cost of a tank-making establishment.

And if you can guarantee that you would employ more people to make mouse traps than any other interested bidder, your chances of getting the factory would be better still.

A spokesman for the surplus property board said today that the regulations under which the government will dispose of its vast chain of war plants are being designed to make more jobs, spread industry throughout the country, and discourage monopolies.

Three Ordinances Introduced At City Council Meeting

STREET REPAIR LEGISLATION IN FIRST READING

Councilmen Discuss Plans To Extend Water Mains In South End

An ordinance amending annual appropriation ordinance No. 3222 was given first reading at city council meeting Tuesday night. The ordinance called for $5,500 for labor and materials in the auto street repair fund and $200 for tools and equipment in the auto street repair fund to be paid by transferring that amount from the general fund.

An ordinance giving sewage disposal plant employees a bonus of $10 per month in addition to their regular monthly salary and a present $15 monthly bonus, was given first hearing.

Another amendment to appropriation ordinance 3222 to include $94 for insurance on a shelter house at Ted Lewis park was given first reading.

A resolution, passed by vote of 4-1, gave the Norfolk and Western railway company permission to raise their tracks at several points in the corporate limits of Circleville.

It was explained by George L. Crites that the rails would not be any higher than they were originally, since they would only be lifted back to original levels. The tracks have sunk from the terrific pounding they have taken, and have displaced much ballast.

Boyd Horn, councilman from the fourth ward, objected to the rails being raised across South Court street. Mr. Horn objected that the tracks were already too high, but other councilmen said driving across the crossing will be easier.

Second reading was given to an ordinance approving salary increases for sewer rental funds collector and parking meter servicemen.

State highway department was granted permission by council to enter city property for the purpose of constructing a bridge over Hargus creek on North Scioto street.

The department also asked permission to do some construction work in Ted Lewis park and playground. The request was presented as a resolution and approved by the five councilmen present.

Councilmen directed City Solicitor Joe Adkins to prepare an ordinance giving the Ohio Water Service company permission to install a 6-inch water main on Long avenue between Ohio and Corwin street, and on Long avenue between Washington and Clinton streets, and on Edison avenue, from Court to Pickaway streets.

Ordinance, councilmen agreed, will stipulate that a fire plug is to be installed in the center of the block on Edison avenue.

The decision to have the water mains installed came after a lengthy discussion in which several instances were cited in which city councilmen had asked the service company to give these sections of Circleville water service. The service company's refusal to do so in 1942 resulted in a case of typhoid, due to residents in that section using water from a condemned well, councilmen said.

At the previous council meeting, two letters from the Ohio Water Service company were read, and some discussion was given them. Tuesday night these letters were read to the council again, and Solicitor Adkins cited the times, giving accurate dates, when the commissioners had asked for water service and been refused by the service company.

The ordinance will probably be prepared and presented for a first reading at the next council meeting.
